Death and Funeral Of Rev. Dr. Richard

Eminent Lutheran Clergyman Died Sunday Afternoon at His Home on Seminary Ridge. For Many Years Professor at Theological Seminary.

Rev. Dr. James W. Richard, died at his home on Seminary Ridge Sunday afternoon at 1.40 o'clock, from Cerebral apoplexy, after an illness lasting only six days. Dr. Richard was aged 86 years and 10 days.

Dr. Richard had been in apparent good health up until Monday, March 1, when he became ill. He thought at first that his sickness was of a minor nature and that he could merely suffering from an attack of the grip. It became apparent Thursday that his condition was serious when his physician pronounced the illness Uraemia.

Dr. Richard rapidly became worse, rallying at times only to suffer a relapse and to grow steadily weaker until the end came. He had several attacks during which it was thought he was dying, one of the most severe of these coming Saturday morning about four o'clock when the patient believed he had set was sent at hand. He rallied however, and lingered until Sunday afternoon when he died very peacefully, the patient being conscious almost to the end.

A POULTRY DEPARTMENT.

Almost two years ago the New York agricultural college officials, believing that the poultry interests of the state had not been receiving the attention that their importance warranted, established a poultry department and placed an expert in charge. Since that time very good and gratifying results are being secured. An average record which has been kept on the hens in the experimental flock shows that during the first year one of these hold 236 eggs, while the same hen has produced 300 eggs in the first 294 days of her second year. At 30 cents a dozen the hen's product of this one hen yielded a profit of $5.40 the second year, $1.20 for feed and care. While none of the other hens has made so good a record, the records all are running in proportion. The experiments in the fall of fore for the production of winter eggs, in which is covered seven hens at four dollars per head to be dug out, at noon a feed of wheat and oats which has to be worked in for the same way, and at night a warm mash of ground grains, vegetables and screening fed in troughs. Fresh water and milk are given daily, while a supply of charcoal, grits, oyster shell and meat scraps is available. In view of the fact that the poultry industries of the state amount annually between $900,000,000 and $700,000,000, this department of the importance of the industry by state agricultural colleges is one of the place.

SOME ECONOMISTS

There are some economists which are practiced by every housekeeper that are open to criticism. Among these may be mentioned the practice of bears a week, more or less, to the starving and neglected of some of stockings that may be bought at from 10 to 25 cents per pair, and which are good better, super, Some and eggs to save a sum of several thousand dollars when sound and made into cookies or cake can be sold by the grocer for 10 cents in quality, if not actually poor quality. Some economists will put cream into the garbage pail in the belief that it is sour, but it is not. In the course of a brief period of time it has wasted and the dishes broken as a result of inconsequential carelessness and the wear and strain on the housewife's nerves and temper will become to more than this amount. Our able the house John may be guilty of even worse attempt at economy—by near bankrupting the family by the competent bred man and as a result have broken machinery, much valuable and countless vexations, besides may forego ill results to the crops and have a twenty dollar runaway and a broken leg or arm or perhaps the loss of a good horse by death or disabling injury. It is about time to be recognized that there are economies, so called, both small and costly in the house, that are not economies at all but cases of extravagance.

AGRICULTURE IN ALABAMA.

At the time of the purchase of Alabama from Georgia by the state of 1819 we was placed at $7,200,000. It being valued as a timber and farming land having little value apart from the worth as it has increased since that opinion prevailed until a few years ago, when vast deposits of coal were discovered, which are still yielding enormous returns. Alabama is now recognized as the most favored state in the union in the matter of natural resources, according to the statistics of the United States department of agriculture, as a result of experiments has been made. Among the Tuben valley, reports that he has been able to raise, per acre, about 50 bushels of corn, 30 bushels of wheat of as good weight and yield as are secured in the west, and very satisfactory crops of grasses and the hardier vegetables. Experiments is much raising show that the Gulf valley can also be made to yield profitably to the rigorous climate and to give excellent fruit-bearing.

TREES POISONED.

An interesting experiment in the destruction of a good many trees in orchards in the state of Illinois has been had the state college horticulturists in the connection with it. The question have died as a result of arsenical poisoning, the generally accepted opinion—namely, that arsenites are insoluble, acting the soil and in such have are taken up into the trees through the roots and distributed to the impossible trees with further investigation it has been found that the fact that the fruit proved to be arsenical the experiments indicated that the arsenic was taken up by the juice of sand distributed by a very small part.

CHEAP ROAD MATERIALS.

Sand-clay Combination is a Good Substitute for Macadam.

In connection with the good roads movement in Kansas it is worth while calling attention once more to the great value of sandclay roads made out of Dolce City and Gordon City but investigated by the field force of the office of public roads of the department of agriculture in Washington.

In a macadam road the dust ground off by the feet of horses and by the wheels of the surface is made area an a binder, forming a tight mass which when rolled and watered is constructed, to the sandclay roads the clay serves as the binder of the gravel, and of clay is be used depends on the quality of the sand.

The proper combination of these materials are determined by filling a glass jar one-third full of the sand to be tested, with water. The water is poured off and the sediment is dried in the jar. The space between the sand grains is represented by the sediment, and the amount necessary to be united with this quantity of sand.

The sand-clay road when well rolled and watered becomes very hard, although even in the spring rainy season it is impervious to water, except in a few days after when rain is so severe as to wash the surface. Under ordinary conditions, in territory of this sort sand-clay roads will last for years with little care, and the sand-clay combination is one of the best and cheapest for easy or barrowyard variety of dirt highways. Sand-clay roads are found in the lake when the spring rains set in. The department has selected three sand-clay roads can be built at a cost of from $300 to $500 per mile, depending of corn, on the distance of hauling. Such roads are practically free from dust heavy. If the top dressing of sand is occasionally added on, and if it is properly rolled and watered it will last used. The surface must be kept smooth with a drag.

Macadam roads cost about ten times as much every few seconds, but the experiment believes they are worth the price. Macadam roads are to be in practicable to construct them.

The department has investigation that the roads built in western Kansas have been successful, and that the extensions are to be constructed by the counties co-operating with the state.

EVILS OF POOR ROADS.

Cost of Hauling Cut in Half by Good Highways.

The average cost of carrying a ton of goods a mile by lake is eight-tenths of a cent, by canal is 9 mills, by rail, average cost of carrying a ton of goods a mile is 1 cent, and by wagon is 25 cents and on common country roads 30 cents.

The latest report made by the department of agriculture shows that shows 2,151,370 miles of public roads in the United States, and that 1,953,000 of said were improved in a rude, primitive manner, leaving but 198,370 miles of improved roads. Of these improvements were reported on less than 50 miles in each county in the state.

Almost every pound of freight originating on farms must be hauled by wagon over a country road, most of it many miles, sometimes as far as 50 or 100 miles, and the cost of hauling is a large item of the cost of production.

Sometimes the goods actually pay a profit of 100 per cent, the difference between railroad station and farm being practically the difference in the cost of haul.

The railroads themselves spend nil Sioux to clip off 1 or 2 per cent from their expenditures, and the money of farmers were protected with a fence to prevent snow from drifting on the railroad tracks, even one-quarter, they would feel that they were getting a square deal.

Road improvement receives much attention in Europe, apparently, but much less than it deserves.

SIMPLE ROAD DRAG.

How to Make and Use One Composed of Two Pieces of Timber.

these irons and bolt them with iron braces to the timbers, as shown in the illustration. Use a chain for hitching.

Hitch a horse to each end of this drag and ride on the timbers, weighting the ditch every time. This brings the earth to the center of the road. Then by using a plank through the center one can fill the ditch. Drag the roads after rains as soon as the mud dries.

Importance of Good Roads.

Secretary Wilson of the Philadelphia as illustration of the part smooth highways is going to play in general freight traffic in the near future Thousands of dollars' worth of goods that until recent years were hauled by the railroads will be carried in motor trucks from the stores or from the farms to the railroad stations. Already there are many trucks for hauling furniture and taking freights from the farmer's door to the city market and bringing back purchases by the same method. In short, the motor truck will be a big factor in determining the mooted question of freight rates.

Dunkenese Valley, March 10.—The White Pine sanatorium is making progress with a large number of new applications.

During the next fortnight the infirmary, which has just been completed and thoroughly equipped, will begin to receive patients. WOMAN DIES FROM BURNS

Mrs. Steinmer Died in Terrible Agony Tuesday Evening from Burns Received on Monday. Sufferings Increased Near End.

Mrs. Eliza Steinmer died Tuesday night at her home on West Middle street, the result of terrible burns received at her home on Monday morning.

Mrs. Steinmer has been almost helpless for a number of years and confined to the house most of the time, fearing some accident. Monday morning, however, she was entirely alone in her home, and was preparing to eat breakfast about the kitchen. She endeavored to light the gas stove, but failing to do so, became caught fire. Almost before she realized what had happened, her clothing was in flames and she was on fire from head to foot.

Mr. Steinmer was just returning home a trip down town when he heard his wife's cries and rushed into the house to find her a veritable pillar of fire. Miss Mary Young, who also lives in the house, heard her screams and she jumped over the fence hurrying to her aid. Mr. Steinmer had wet his coat in the sink and with this threw his tried to smother the flames on his wife.

The woman was suffering terribly from burns on her hands, face and body, nothing else at hand with which to extinguish the fire but her husband's coat. Miss Young poured one bucketful of water after another over her, and in this way succeeded finally in putting out the flames.

The accident occurred at a time when no one was at home. Mr. and Mrs. Steinmer and the former's mother live together, and the latter had gone away at the time of the catastrophe and the Steinmers were at home alone. Her husband and Miss Young were the only eligible boors in trying to extinguish the flames.

Mrs. Steinmer's death was most horrible. The sufferings increased as death approached and she begged for relief. Dr. Lentz in the afternoon it was seen that she could not survive and that relief was not given equally worse until death came. Her body was even picked up. She remained conscious up to the last, and her sufferings were so great as her sufferings increased.

Mrs. Steinmer was held in high esteem and a devoted member of her family. She was born in this city 67 years ago o'clock Wednesday from her late home. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Bikle, pastor of the Reformed church. Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

Mrs. Mickley was engaged in her usual household duties during the morning, and was apparently in the best of health. While engaged in her kitchen she was suddenly stricken with heart failure and died before medical assistance could be secured. Mrs. Mickley was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bikle, of Bradenville, and was married to Mr. Mickley about two years ago. She was a member of the Lutheran church and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. Besides her husband she is survived by her parents, one brother, Jacob Bikle, of Bradenville, and two sisters, Mrs. Clarence Bream, of Littlestown, and Miss Ella Bikle, at home. THEATING HORSE CORNS.

Preventive and Curative Measures Which Are Simple and Effective.

There is small endeavoring with the average horse owner of the sufferings some animals go through on account of corns. The horse's foot is sent, and the services of the animals are often lost to the owner without having knowledge of the cause. Dr. A. S. Alexander, of the United States bureau of animal industry, says the following about corns:

"As in all other troubles, the cause must be removed before a cure can be effected. In a great majority of cases the cause will be at fault. The corn proper feet, perfectly formed, a fair shoe with the proper bar, and the frog which rests evenly on the wall proper is the best. In fact feet it is often necessary to remove the bar as much as possible on the upper surface of the frog in order to relieve pressure. If the heels are very low the bar should be left on and the shoe made thicker.

"If the foot is very broad and the wall light toward the heels a fer shoe, with the bar left on, will be found to exert excessive tension upon the soft tissues upon the foot, owing to the weight of the body. A piece of leather placed between the foot and shoe will serve largely to destroy concussion, and in this is absolutely necessary or some animals to enable them to work.

"Among the preventive measures can be mentioned those which serve to maintain the equilibrium of the foot. The dead horn upon the surface of the sole and retains moisture for a long time, but presents the in from any undermining of the construction of the interior is necessary, and instances can be obtained. The wash which is used for this purpose should be directed to the greatest. The amount of moisture which is allowed to the horse rather from one to six feet during the year is necessary to the construction of the foot. If the hoofcase becomes too dry it will not expand when the ice laid on at most eighteen inches from the ground. The wall is generally exceeds twelve inches during the year. On the other hand, if it is applied in the hothouse as the bore horse is frequently kept there will be of any provision made for drainage the soilage frequently is the foul. The solid and top soilage is not so good. But if frequently washed once to three feet, depending upon the condition of the foot and the moisture is shown in the cut of cross section of the foot.

The amount of moisture which is the great compared with the volume. The moisture which is lost in winter is proportion to the amount used.

The amount of moisture the frame work is made by laying a 2 by 4 slit on the concrete floorings, the slats rest on the foundation by cementing a few inches of the ends of the slats or allowing them to extend through the 2 by 4 slit, and by fastening them in that position upon tile slit sixteen inches apart from center to center. The floor for the 2 by 4 roof are threaded to the floor by the cement. The distance apart as the slats are placed depends upon the size of the 2 by 4 standing should be at least six inches. The slats on which the standing may be bounded either with common boards or with the more durable people slating is nailed, or with patent siding which is more durable but costly than the cheapest and requiring only a single thickness.

The roof should be made with not less than a pitch of one inch grade and preferably covered with shingles, the latter since the best ventilation than other slats or metal. However, paper roofing is used with success. The roof should extend at least two feet beyond the walls in order for the best protection of the feet. The ventilator may be placed in the roof at the ridge of the ropes and when so placed care for the ventilation.

A continuous door should be cut in the wall to allow the ice to be put in. This door may extend from the gable down to within two feet of the bottom.

In the cut, ice and salt boxes consisted, the side standing shown how the ice-house has the advantage of attitude the ice from the bottom to the sides for cooling the milk. Its ice is put in through the door in the top of the house. It operates satisfactorily, but is not as convenient as the ice-house in the side. The ice-house is the best and the most economical.

THE COUNTRY ICEHOUSE.

An Important Adjunct to the Us to Dairy Farm.

By PROFESSOR CHEAR REP, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

In the use of stanwood farming the icehouse is an important adjunct. The most economical building in the construction of which is of very severe the greatest amount of ice in proportion to the amount of material. Such an icehouse is largely caused by settings from the logs, sides and bottom. In a properly constructed icehouse the ice is to be properly packed and cared for no waste should occur from the melting of the ice. Of the melting from the sides, bottom and top is caused by insufficient insulation

The amount of moisture which is allowed to the horse rather from one to six feet during the year is necessary to the construction of the foot. If the hoofcase becomes too dry it will not expand when the ice laid on at most eighteen inches from the ground. The wall is generally exceeds twelve inches during the year. On the other hand, if it is applied in the hothouse as the bore horse is frequently kept there will be of any provision made for drainage the soilage frequently is the foul. The solid and top soilage is not so good. But if frequently washed once to three feet, depending upon the condition of the foot and the moisture is shown in the cut of cross section of the foot.

The bottom should be kept as dry as possible. The shoe possible and always a proper shoe for the foot. The shoe to be determined by the amount of he used during the year. For a

The warrants were issued and placed in the hands of High Constable Dunbar who delivered Monmouth under arrest, and who in default of bail was committed to jail by the committing magistrate.

The story of the case is about as follows:

After stealing the team on Tuesday night down in Shafer's stable Hanover, where he stopped for a short time, after which he drove to the home of Howard Bowman, in Carroll County, Md., arriving at midnight. Monmouth drove to the home of Amspacher, near Abbottstown, where he made another stop and Thursday morning he reached his home near Neville.

Monmouth was at his home near Neville, where he has a farm, when and where he has a wife and eight small children.

On the way to Hanover Monmouth admitted to Officer Kiser that he had taken the team.

COUNTY FRUIT PROSPECTS

Considerable apprehension is felt among Adams County fruit growers and fruit-eaters for the safety of the coming fruit crop, on account of last week's severe storm. Peaches are said to be no real reason for such apprehension, although the blossoms of the present cold snap makes the question of a good fruit crop somewhat problematic, with the odds in favor of a good crop.

The open weather for the past month has caused the buds to swell and the sap to start and now with cold weather following, the peanut meat may be killed. However, the chances are in favor of the buds on the fruit trees not coming to maturity, owing to the leaf bole. No fruit buds with the possible exception of peaches and there are few of these in this section, have taken on any life.

FLOODED

Reports from different sections of Adams County tell of about a half dozen sweeping showers having plowed during the past ten days. Very few have done any work to any further guidance other than cleaning up and are now glad that they were not deluded by the balmy Spring-like air into thinking that Summer had come to stay. Wheat was looking well in many parts of Adams County before it was overed by the snow.

For Cash Down.

(Copyright, 1909, by T. C. McClure.)

Three hour day it was for the stage stone to the brethren of Joe Pickler and united for a fitting end. Joe had not meant to be bad any more than he could sell so much as a nutmeg. Indeed, he had been a model boy, painted, weather beaten and ghostly, before the bars and shade were of but the fences gone to decay, the fields grown up to weeds and the house literally spoke of poverty and shiftlessness. Joe's father had been a rover, a rover for a roadside inn, but travel had lowered his standard of inner rest, and he had abandoned the plan. Shiftless and lazy, he had settled down to a life of sheltered with and "scorned" there by the village people, who were too fine of spire to keep going. They were shirking the duty of charity, according to the peddler three sot.

"Dey's no use gwinginx about yer, Joe," they would say. "Ye'll git no more dis summer," he said.

"Dey's no use in dat form for two years and almost steered to death," replied Joe.

"But you lack scrupples, you see. Dey require money down to be let go on farming and take hold of something better when I'm right at peddler Lord, man, but what a chance you're throwing away!"

"Yes silas told Joe there was money in the peddling business, but he had observed Mrs. Pinkily as the reason for his refusal.

"Buried money be heaped; it's not for the likes of you," he said, before your eyes it's in the hands of the Lord. Ye'll be a poor farmer, Joe, but ye'll be a poor peddler, and ye'll be nothing—not even rich. Ye'll be riding in your own carriage and I'll be walking in the dust, but it is well until I come along to those who have buried their gold."

"And you'll show me?" exclaimed Joe, interested in the old man's talk. His nose sp and looked around.

"That's the way," he said. First I want to look this old house over. I want to see whether it is fit for a home. I'll leave a square talk with you. You are not going to farm, Joe, and you are in this peddling—not but what it's a noble occupation, but there's more opportunities for a hunting man."

"Yes, I'll be glad to have you for two hours, Joe," said the old man, as they left the house he signed it. What he declared to himself was that he would be his guide having. They hadn't found the treasure, but they had found where their heads at each other and grunting. They were a queer pair, and the first to meet of them and another six mins to the village. The fact that the peddler's carriage was there was known, and the newspapers were published. Before they got to the village they had already the editors. The editors had at hair raising adventure in the woods. There were a score of other papers in the county, but the editors of these would be real exited upon half of the story. Consequently, when the two men drove into the village there was a big time in the village. And hatins of two weeks ago, when Joe Pickler's old farmhouse was the scene of a midnight conference and gruesome and hair raising.

MINERS' DEMANDS ARE REJECTED

Operators Flatly Refuse to Grant Any of Them.

MEN PREPARING NEXT MOVE

Operators' Stand Was a Great Disappointment to Workers, the Majority of Whom Are Opposed to a Strike, Owners Proposed Renewal of Present Agreement For Three Years.

Philadelphia, March 12.—At an interstate coal operators met the committee of bond nine a decision to reject Starr's offer in the Reading Terminal building and flatly refused to grand the men any of the demands they had before them, and at the same time proposed to the mine workers that the present agreement, which expires March 31, be renewed for another three years.

This decision, which was not accepted by the mine workers, was reached after two hours and the operators were again asking any concessions came as a great disappointment to the men when they were officially informed of the stand taken by the operators.

The formal announcement made by the two-fifths of the public and the refusal of the operators to grant the demands of the men was contained in a statement agreed upon by both sides. It is to part as follows:

Operators Say Wages Can't Be Raised.

"The operators declined to accede to the demands. The chief reason offered for the rejection was that any increase in the cost of mining would necessitate either an increase in the price of coal, and that such an advance was impracticable. The operators also declined to go to the arbitrate mining industry were already at a high level and could not be increased.

The announcement of the operators' position was followed by a free discussion of the miners' proposals, each side stating its views fully in regard thereto. The operators reiterated their unwillingness to reopen the eight hour day question and after the matter passed upon by the entire the strike committee of the miners. They declared themselves opposed to the rates and the proposition for the wage agreement.

"They declined to recognize the United Mine Workers of America solely on the ground that it was controlled by bituminous miners, and that one of the documents the operators made the definite proposal to renew the present agreement for a term of three years.

While President Lewis has not announced what he will do, it is believed that he had prepared himself for the result of the conference and that he will impart his intentions to his fellow committeemen at the meeting of the talks of the next week or two. Once again go into conference. Those who have followed the trend of affairs in the anthracite region believe that it will be useless for the miners to further insist upon any material change in the present agreement, and it is expected that the miners' committee will call a convention of the delegates soon to take up the operators' refusal and counter proposition. What the convention will be is a matter of conjecture.

Workers Are Opposed to Strike.

So far as could be learned from the opinion of the majority of the workers are opposed to a strike, although it is said that they are not strongly entrenched to carry on a contest such as the magnitude of the strikes of 1900 and 1902. There are, however, several men of influence in the organization who say they would vote for a strike if there are no concessions made.

While the situation does not look as favorable as it might there is hope among the men that the two parties will easily come to an agreement without resorting to any radical action. Before this is reached, however, it is not unlikely that Chairman Search of the Anthracite Conciliation Board, and Commissioner Neill, the United States Labor Commissioner, will be asked to assist in bringing about an agreement, as they did in the bituminous field in their successful settlement of the Pennsylvania Railroad company's coal handlers' strike.

CHAFFERS SEEK NEW TRIAL

Argument Opened in Pennsylvania Capital Supreme Court.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 12.—Arguments on the appeal from the decision of Judge Kunkel, of the Dauphin county court involving a new trial of the Seal capital case, opened before the supreme court here. The lessee case which was tried here just a year ago, is being heard by the entire bench.

Judge Kunkel in his decision in the case said that the contractor was entitled to the value of the work he did for furniture supplied to the state.

The arguments were presented by M. Sandoven, who got the bulk of the work, and by Attorney Gen. Todd, representing of the capitol, ex-Auditor General Snyder and Deputy Attorney-General of Public Buildings James Mathews. Mr. Mathews is dead, but his estate was represented by his son Ben and costs imposed upon him if the decision of the lower court should a retrial be granted. FOUR AT A TIME

Cuban Women Gave Birth to Quadruplets.

Havana, March 12.—The wife of a poor cigarmaker named Ramon Lopez, who lives in the suburbs of this city, has given birth to quadruplets, two boys and two girls. Four children at one birth is unknown in the mother as a woman of the Cuban capital, and the event has caused a profound sensation in Cuba.

The deepest sympathy is expressed for Cardinal Gibbons, who has become the heroin of paying Father Lopez $130,000 on Visionary Schemes.

So is declared by the investigation of the Rev. Thomas J. Lopez, pastor of the church, to $130,000, exclusive of a church debt of $24,000.

Although the cardinal may not be responsible for the financial schemes of the priest, he had not the slightest knowledge or consent, yet he feels that he owes it to the people to pay every dollar he pays them as soon as possible. As the cardinal has not the ready money at the present means, he asks the indulgence of the public for a few months longer, and he will make every endeavor to pay every cent that is due to them.

COURT MODIFIES LABOR DECISION

But Partially Sustains Judge in Famous Case.

MAY REFER TO BOYCOTT

Federation of Labor Can Only Be Restrained From Publishing the Name of Buck's Stove Company to the "We Don't Patronize List," Which Is Held to Be a Conspiracy to Boycott.

Washington, March 12.—The American Federation of Labor hereafter may freely refer to the boycott against the Bucks Stove & Range company, of St. Louis, and may publish the "We Don't Patronize" list.

This is the effect of a far-reached importance to the labor world, to many factories and to newspapers generally, in the sweeping decision handed down by the supreme court of the District of Columbia in the famous injunction case of the Bucks stove company against Samuel Gompers, president of the federation of labor, which has been before the courts of the District of Columbia and in various phases for months.

In a recent decision of Justice Gould, of the supreme court of the District, the American Federation of Labor and the officers, Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell, Morrison and Wilhelm were enjoined from conspiring to boycott the Bucks Stove & Range company, and from printing or publishing, or distributing, through the mails or otherwise, any copy of the Federationist, or other publication containing the name of, or mention its business or products in the "We Don't Patronize" list, or any other list, or in connection with any boycott against the complainant company, and from interfering either in person or by agent with persons or customers to in "We Don't Patronize" list, or any other list, or in connection with any boycott.

The court holds that the defendants have the constitutional right to criticise referring to the Bucks Stove Co. as they have but also that the acts are made in furtherance of an illegal boycott.

Then the door opened and the vision stopped, thumping on the floor with pitchfork. The intruder wore a black mask, a long black cape and a red cape, from beneath which the end of a long tail protruded.

The man then began to cavort gayly with the screamer, but "satan" fled from the church. There is a great mystery as to the identity of the masquerader.
